Percilla Stevenson

Percilla Stevenson

Growing up impacted by generations of mass incarceration, Percilla continues to combat cultural genocide to honor future generations. Led by the power of proximity, Sacred Generations is an award-winning community founded by her family to heal system-impacted tribal families. Sacred Vote, a groundbreaking movement to heal voters, was recognized as a world-changing idea by Fast Company. Percilla is a proud alum of Loyola University Chicago and Institute of American Indian Arts. After being a student and teacher in Teach for America classrooms, Percilla studied at Harvard Kennedy School and UC Davis School of Law. Percilla is a Roddenberry, Echoing Green, and New Profit fellow supported by award winning artist John Legend for her bold ideas and impact.

“Her leadership modeled our core values. I saw evidence of teachers internalizing outcomes. I was so proud, and grateful. Our organization will benefit, including thousands of students and teachers.” –Former Supervisor

“Her profile of passion, resilience, and resource magnetism is impressive. Percilla joined senior leaders to evolve our model of teacher excellence and continues to inspire us. She captivates and compels.” –Former Coach

“Percilla brings an unwavering commitment to her purpose. Percilla is a force because she values people. She mastered the art of relationship building and fosters team cultures that promote community.” –Former Colleague

Educational Accomplishments

- Certificate in Native American Art History and Museum Studies at Institute of American Indian Arts in Santa Fe, NM. As a current student, I’m studying artistic practices of cultural care and presentation.
- Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing at Institute of American Indian Arts in Santa Fe, NM. As an alum writing a debut novel, I’ve studied the art of literature with bestselling creatives serving as my mentors.
- Certificate of Community College Faculty Preparation at Sacramento State in Sacramento, CA. As an apprentice, I’m teaching and mentored by award-winning community college faculty in California.
- Bachelor of Science in Psychology and Criminal Justice at Loyola University Chicago in Chicago, IL. As a first-generation college student and new young mom, I graduated with academic honors on the Dean’s list.

Professional Accomplishments

In the beginning of my career, I taught middle school reading, writing, history, math, and science. Given my performance as a new teacher, I was selected by the highest performing principal in the district to lead history and science teachers as a department chair. In addition, I served on the leadership and positive behavior support teams to support all students and teachers at our school site. Afterwards, it was an honor to accelerate my leadership in education through many roles. During this time of my career, I had the opportunity to serve on a national council to support tribal students and teachers. Over the years, we built a growing network of tribal educators committed to educational sovereignty through teacher recruitment, leadership development and policy advocacy. After teaching for a few years in the classroom, it was a joy to support teachers and coaches by creating diverse professional development experiences and resources. In addition, I’ve served as an expert consultant in philanthropy to drive equitable grantmaking and lead efforts dedicated to healing system-impacted tribal families. It’s been an honor to receive global recognition for my innovative entrepreneurship, and build diverse leadership and management skills:

- Fundraising: Lead grant research, proposals, and reporting while building diverse revenue models
- Financial Management: Inform and monitor operating budget, expenses, and financial sustainability
- Stakeholder Engagement: Build or manage key relationships across partners and network resources
- Marketing: Community relationship management, including diverse media relationship building
- Strategic Planning: Build responsive learning organizations led by a culture of care and proximity
- Project Management: Create, evolve, and manage diverse projects aligned to vision and resources
- Leadership Development: Build, support and amplify diverse values, voices, and visions for change
- Recruitment: Engage and recruit underrepresented advocates, partners, and allies across communities
- Policy Advocacy: Lead policy research, development, and advocacy across interconnected issues
- Community Organizing: Organize intergenerational campaigns and diverse community gatherings

STATUS REPORT ON PROJECTS, DEVELOPMENTS AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

The workgroup convened twice to edit the previously presented brochure to update and reflect the suggested edits from the PCCY board. The updated version is attached to be submitted with Agenda.

CURRENT ISSUES AND/OR CONCERNS:

Feedback is needed from the Board to identify the best agency website to host an information page that the QR code on the rackcard will point to. Advocates Supporting Coast Kids (AScK) has offered their website as a possible option.

Other suggestions include the County Sheriff's website or the County Health Agency website.
